21 Racial Microaggressions You Hear On A Daily Basis

A photographer at Fordham asked her peers to write down the microaggressions they’ve encountered. Here is what they had to say.

Photographer Kiyun asked her friends at Fordham University’s Lincoln Center campus to “write down an instance of racial microaggression they have faced.”

The term “microaggression” was used by Columbia professor Derald Sue to refer to “brief and commonplace daily verbal, behavioral, or environmental indignities, whether intentional or unintentional, that communicate hostile, derogatory, or negative racial slights and insults toward people of color.” Sue borrowed the term from psychiatrist Dr. Chester Pierce who coined the term in the ’70s.
While the term “microaggressions” has been a part of academic discourse for some time (“micro-inequities” was coined by an MIT Ph.D. in 1973), it became better known through the popular Tumblr Microaggressions. The Tumblr is a project that aims to highlight the daily microaggressions people encounter through user submitted stories.

“This blog seeks to provide a visual representation of the everyday of “microaggressions.” Each event, observation and experience posted is not necessarily particularly striking in and of themselves. Often, they are never meant to hurt - acts done with little conscious awareness of their meanings and effects. Instead, their slow accumulation during a childhood and over a lifetime is in part what defines a marginalized experience, making explanation and communication with someone who does not share this identity particularly difficult. Social others are microaggressed hourly, daily, weekly, monthly.

This project is NOT about showing how ignorant people can be in order to simply dismiss their ignorance. Instead, it is about showing how these comments create and enforce uncomfortable, violent and unsafe realities onto peoples’ workplace, home, school, childhood/adolescence/adulthood, and public transportation/space environments.”

Here are a few of the microaggressions Fordham students identified as a part of their lives:
"Can you read this?"
He showed me a Japanese character on his phone.

When I gave a speech about racism, the emcee introduced me as "Jaime Garcia." My name is Jaime Rodriguez, not all Latinos have the last name GARCIA.

"What ARE you?"
HUMAN.
Being biracial doesn't make me a 'what.'

'SO... You'RE CHINESE... RIGHT?"
"You don’t Speak Spanish?"

"This girl sitting next to me moves, to sit closer to someone she’s talking to, and this white guy whispers loudly that she moved b/c I... "Smell like rice"

"You’re not really Asian"

"Just because I’m Mexican that doesn’t mean I should be the automatic 1st choice for the role of Dora the Explorer in the high school skit"
“No, where are you really from?”

“So what does your hair look like today?” She said as she pulled off my hat without my permission.

“So, like, what are you?”

“Not your China Doll.”
"Can you see as much as white people? You know, because of your EYES...?"

"So, what do you guys speak in Japan? ASIAN???"

"Courtney I never see you as a black girl. #OPENyourEYES!"

"You're really pretty... for a dark skin girl."
The limited representation of my race in your classroom does not make me the voice of all Black People.

When people think it's weird that I listen to Carrie Underwood

“No, you’re white.”
